

As a member of the University of Lyon Association (COMUE: Communauté d'Universités et Établissements), Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University is actively committed to international development.

Offering a wide range of Bachelor, Master's and PhD degrees, students have access to vocational training in the humanities and social sciences, covering several disciplines - law, political science, philosophy, management, economics, project management, languages, literature, history, geography, planning, information and communication - across six faculties and institutes in a number of locations.

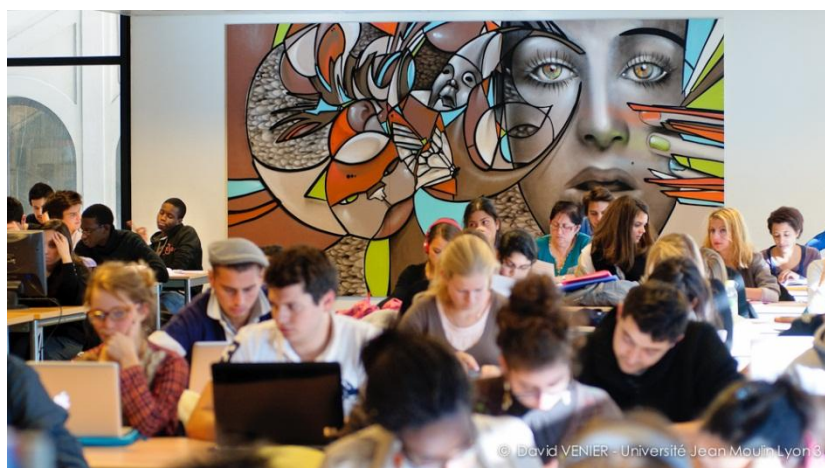

Open to students from all across Europe and the world, Jean Moulin University is a staunch advocate for multiculturalism. With more than 350 international agreements in 57 countries, students at Lyon 3 have the opportunity to complete an internship or a year/semester of study abroad. Students are also strongly encouraged to learn a foreign language through one of the university's many language programs.

Each year, the university welcomes more than 4,000 students from foreign universities (a quarter of whom are on an exchange program), representing 130 different nationalities. Attentive to the quality and visibility of its research and conscious of a global scientific environment, Lyon 3 aims to provide its teams with a European and international framework that is open to both intercultural and interdisciplinary approaches.

This international approach is a structured and strategic objective that is part of university policy.

Place Bellecour

Manufacture des Tabacs Library

Study Abroad Programs

Since 1993, Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University has established the study abroad and double diploma programs. These programs* were developed primarily to train law and management students in a bicultural environment, allowing them to be able to develop institutional, industrial and commercial links with the countries involved.

Study abroad programs vary according to the diplomas awarded: a single degree from Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University (National Diploma) or 2 degrees, one French and one local.

To date, 40 study abroad and double diploma programs are offered in countries as diverse as Armenia, Cambodia, China, Egypt, Hungary, Iran, Madagascar, Morocco, Ouagadougou, Poland, Czech Republic, Tunisia and Vietnam. About 1,900 bachelor and masters students take part in these programs each year.

*Study abroad programs are Bachelor and Masters courses taught in French that take place in various partner institutions abroad.

Manufacture des Tabacs Campus

Quais Campus

Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University has ongoing partnerships with a number of major economic and scientific development zones including, Latin America (Brazil, Argentina, Mexico and Colombia), Asia (China, South Korea, Taiwan, Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia), India, North Africa (Morocco, Egypt, Algeria and Tunisia), the Middle East (Armenia, Kazakhstan) and Oceania (Australia, New Zealand).

Europe and North America are the first geographical development zones to be part of Lyon 3's international policy and remain key elements to the university's overall objectives.

At the heart of the Rhône-Alpes region, itself committed to international development; Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University aims to support the ongoing development of incentive schemes (e.g. inbound and outbound regional mobility grants).

International Students, Manufacture des Tabacs Campus

The Saône Quays

Strategic Outlook

The International Relations Office is currently focusing its strategic efforts on the concept of "Globalisation and Contextualisation", a general theme that has been devised by the university. Through its training and research programs, Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University's goal is to work and improve on global themes (International Business, International Law, Comparative Cultural Studies). However, whilst the overall approach is a global one, it is also closely linked to a local (Lyon), regional (Rhône-Alpes), national (France) and continental (Europe) context that is inevitably a part of the university's values. To study and work in Lyon with an international and comparative perspective is to equally consider the lands and territories to which we belong. So goes the concept of "Globalisation and Contextualisation", which exists in our international student programs, study abroad programs (42) and our double degrees, offered at both undergraduate (Bachelor) and postgraduate level (Masters & PhD).

Two essential aspects need to be considered within this context: "training" and "experiences".

- Training

Increasing awareness of available courses and programs: double degrees/triple degrees, double diplomas/joint diplomas, trilingual training, study abroad programs, international student programs (SELF), national diplomas, etc.

- Experiences

Continue to encourage incoming and outgoing student exchanges (programs and individual exchanges) and develop a 'trilingual experience'.

The trilingual experience covers all the pathways students can take in order to learn a third language and new culture. This can apply to non-French speaking students that we welcome across our campuses thanks to our English-language programs. During their stay, these students can benefit from learning the French language and culture (in particular through 'FLE' classes: French as a Foreign Language). This can also apply to students from Lyon who choose to study English in non-English speaking countries: already competent in two languages (French and English), they thus have the opportunity to learn a third language.

Photo credits

©David VENIER – Jean Moulin Lyon 3 University